MACHADO REGIME MAKES DESPERATE ATTEMPT AT ORDER

300 Soldiers Rushed From Camp Columbia To Havana's Center

MASSACRE SCENE

Drastic Measures Taken To Insure Machado's Dictatorship

HAVANA, Cuba, Aug. 8—Three hundred additional soldiers from Camp Columbia were rushed to the center of Havana today as the Cuban capital, scene of a bloody massacre, which claimed 40 dead and at least 200 wounded, lay dormant in the agony of suspense and fear.

Rejection by the Cuban congress of demands for the resignation of President Gerardo Machado as the only means to restore peace, the government took new and drastic measures to insure continuance of his dictatorship. Faced with a warning from Ambassador Sumner Wells that the United State would regard the situation here as grave in the extreme unless the crisis is solved by Congressional action, the Machado regime made a desperate attempt to restore order by bayonet rule.

The new troops from Camp Columbia were sent through the city in the early morning hours.

ESCAPADES OF "TUSKO" ARE ENDED BY DEATH

ON MANY RAMPAGES

By George L. Scott
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PORTLAND, Ore., Aug. 8—(INS)—No more will circus barkers round up stray dimes by calling: "Ladeeze and gent-tell-men, step right this way to see Tusko. Tusko, thee ten-ton ell-lee-funt. King of the mass-toe-duns. The largest pach-ee-derm in cap-tiv-iteee."

Tusko is dead at 43, a tender age as elephants go.

Gentle as a babe one day, vicious and unruly the next, America's largest and most publicized circus animal died recently, a victim of internal disorders.

Before he snapped off his nine-foot tusks in a "solitary" cell of 80-pound steel rails where he was placed during one of his surly rampages, Tusko was heralded throughout the country as the monarch of great circuses. His huge bulk demanded a special car in which he was trundled from coast to coast.

Stories of his escapades are widely told amoung circus people. Portland residents will long remember his attempt to escape into the eastside residential district Christmas Day, 1931, after smashing all but one of his ponderous leg chains.

Traffic over bridges near Tusko's quarters was diverted while a score of expert marksmen armed with high-powered rifles waited with fingers on triggers to blast him into oblivion. Mayor Baker's order to shoot only if he broke his last chain was all that saved Tusko's life that time.

A steel water main was finally rolled near his legs and his keeper crawled through the pipe, fastened his broken chain to a steel cable from a portable power winch and Tusko was literally wound-up.

Tusko's adventure at Sedro Wooley,

BANKERS OF COUNTY SEE BUCKS HERDS, ORCHARDS

GREENAWALT ASSISTS

The trip, taken in automobiles, was arranged by the four members of the agricultural committee of the bankers' association, namely, W. W. Hurley, New Hope, chairman; John W. Cooper, Pineville; the Rev. C. B. Weaver, Perkasie; S. F. Cressman, Quakertown. Co-operation in planning the tour was given by William F. Greenawalt, county farm agent.

The first stop was made at the co-operative egg auction in the Kolbe Building, Doylestown. Then the caravan continued to the orchards of S. L. Paxson, Lumberville, where 70 acres of apple and peach trees were viewed. Some of the fruits are inter-planted. Mr. Paxson showed his visitors the cold storage plant on the place, which was constructed in the basement of an old barn.

The farm of W. W. Hurley, New Hope, proved very interesting. There is located one of the oldest herds of Guernsey cattle in the county. Every animal in the herd was raised by the owner. Mr. Hurley is one of the pioneer Guernsey cattle breeders in this part of Pennsylvania.

At the Thompson Memorial Church, near Neeley's Mill, women of the congregation provided a bounteous dinner for the travellers. A trek was also made to the tower on Bowman's Hill.

At the Indian Rock Game Farm, Newtown, the bankers were shown the flocks of turkeys, pheasants and ducks. There are located on this farm 2000 turkeys, 1000 pheasants and 1200 ducks.

The Neshaminy Farms Dairy was the next attraction, where the herd of 165 Ayeshires were seen. The Bucks Countians arrived at milking time, and were shown how the milk does not come in contact with human hands. In the central milking room they watched the process whereby the milk goes directly from the milking machine to containers. The riding horses at this farm also proved an attraction.

The Rev. B. Warner Shay, former pastor of the Yardley M. E. Church, and Thomas B. Everist, who have both moved from Yardley, gave valuable aid earlier in the year in reorganizing the troop. The week's program at the camp was arranged by Messrs. Bennet, Colson and Marion, of the troop committee.

BLUE MOON FAILS TO AGREE WITH WORKERS

Five Hour Conference Results In Disagreement, Says Secretary

MOVE TO END STRIKES

A five-hour conference yesterday between executives of the Blue Moon hosiery mill at Croydon and union officials presided over by Federal Mediator Homer Brown, resulted in disagreement, according to William Smith, national secretary of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers.

A voluntary 25 per cent. increase in piecework and hourly rates for approximately 26,000 workers was voted yesterday by the board of directors of the Full Fashioned Hosiery Manufacturers of America, Inc., as new moves were made to end hosiery strikes.

The manufacturers' action climaxed a meeting in the Bellevue-Stratford, called by George Lang, president of the group.

The pay increase affects only union shops.

Manufacturers' spokesmen made public the following resolution:

"Resolved, that the Full Fashioned Hosiery Manufacturers of America, Inc., and its members in compliance with the request of the President of the United States, and in furtherance of the principle and spirit of co-operation between industry and labor, and of equitable adjustment of wage rates inherent in the National Recovery Act, voluntarily pay to its workers an increase of 25 per cent. in the piecework and hourly rates specified in the collective agreement between the association and the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, effective July 31, 1933."

Announcement at Washington that the Recovery Administration will grapple with hosiery strike matters here caused union officials to declare a moratorium on new walkouts in the industry.

The union's decision not to call new strikes became known when William Smith, national secretary of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, asserted all labor disputes in the hosiery field will be submitted to the conciliation board set up Friday by President Roosevelt. Dr. Leo Wolman, member of the board, said in Washington he and his colleagues are prepared to consider the strike matter today. He indicated a sub-committee will be named to study the situation.

BOY IS INSTANTLY KILLED; HEAD IS CRUSHED BY WAGON

SLIPS FROM OATS

Was Taking Last Load of Grain to Barn; His First Day There

DOYLESTOWN, Aug. 8.—A boy of 15 met a horrible death when he fell from a wagon-load of oats on a Lahaska farm last night, his head being crushed by two wheels of the heavy vehicle.

Young Cook, who had been employed in harvesting crops in various sections of Bucks County this summer, had gone to the farm of K. Maximuk, Lahaska, last evening for the first time. He was driving the horses which were hauling the last load to the barn when the accident occurred.

According to witneses to the tragedy several sheaves of oats slipped from under the lad who was seated on the grain near the front of the wagon. Before he was able to halt his descent he was hurled to the wagon-tongues, and then fell to the ground. The two right wheels passed over his head. Death was instantaneous. Bucks County Coroner Dr. J. J. Sweeney, Doylestown, issued a certificate stating death was accidental, and the body was removed to a morgue in Wycombe.

Italian Air Armada Sweeping Across Atlantic

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(INS)—The Italian air armada, sweeping across the Atlantic from Newfoundland to the Azores, made fast time in the first part of its journey, according to an announcement by the Mackay Radio Co. today.

The announcement said that at 7.05 a. m., E. D. T., the two leading squadrons of the armada were 450 miles from Shoal Harbor. This was three hours and twenty minutes after the take-off from Shoal Harbor.

SHOAL HARBOR, Newfoundland, Aug. 8—(INS)—Sweeping into the red haze of dawn, the 24 seaplanes of General Italo Balbo's Italian air armada resumed their triumphal homeward flight today.

Bound for the Azores, about 1,500 miles away, the air squadron took off at 3.45 a. m., E. D. T., General Balbo in the lead.

The remaining planes of the squadron followed in quick succession and the entire armada, in groups of threes, was in the air and away within 25 minutes.

Half an hour after General Balbo's plane rose, it was sighted over Heart's Delight, speeding toward the sea.

With weather reports along the entire line of flight favorable, General Balbo expected to reach the Azores in about nine hours' flying time. Some of the planes will land at San Miguel while others will alight in Horta.

Weather at Cape Race was reported good, and also at Horta. Fog was reported off the Grand Banks, but the armada was expected to skirt this.

Blaze Destroys Factory; Damages Several Others

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8—(INS)—One factory was destroyed and several others were damaged early today when a blaze of undetermined origin raged for hours in a group of manufacturing plants in the northeast section along the banks of the Delaware River. The loss was placed at $100,000.

Several firemen were overcome and a worker in the Century Stearic Acid Company's plant, where the fire originated, was rescued by Adam Horger, 53, a watchman. Both Horger and the man he carried to safety, William Fischer, 25, were burned by flaming oil.

More than 100 residents of the neighborhood were driven from their homes by the dense and choking fumes.

Within an hour the fire had spread to the Neatsfoot Oil Refining Company, the Peerless Chemical Works, Davis Glue Factory, Dill and Collins Paper Company and the wool establishments of Jake Brodsky and D. Straus.

The acid plant was leveled, but firemen checked the flames before they gained much headway in the other structures.

COPPER'S USE GROWS

What can be done under the pressure of urgency finds current illustration in the copper industry.

For several years, this metal has been in light demand. With other industries in which it is used restricting operations, it became a drag on the market. Leaders in the industry recognized that to increase its uses would mean more profitable markets. Laboratory investigations and experiments were begun. As a result of these copper's usefulness has been multiplied many times.

The chief thing leading to this was development of a process of electro-deposition of copper on a lead-faced cylinder. By the use of this process it now is possible to obtain sheet copper 30 inches wide in rolls of indefinite length and uniform thickness.

Among the new uses thus given copper is that of a roofing material. The latter is made by bonding the copper sheet to heavy cotton fabric that has been impregnated with asphalt. It is said to have five times the strength of ordinary roofing and it can be easily laid.

Until the new process was developed it was impossible to obtain sheet copper of a greater width than six inches, which greatly limited its uses. Among the new uses to which it already is being put is that of greeting cards, indestructible covers for books and recorder paper that is not affected by humidity or atmospheric changes. Development of other uses is predicted. Architects already are experimenting with copper sheet as a modernistic wall paper.

Other industries may find in the case of copper a lesson which they may be able to apply to themselves. The chemical laboratory may show them the way to enlarged profits.

BITTERNESS REMAINS

Although President Machado of Cuba has granted amnesty to political prisoners and restored constitutional guarantees, his action does not necessarily mean an immediate ending of the violence and terrorism that have prevailed in the island republic.

The president announced that he would not resign but would retain office until the expiration of his term. There recently had been indications that he was contemplating stepping out in order to assure the restoration of normal conditions.

His plan now seems to be to stay in office but to give due recognition to the constitution in the hope of winning the confidence of the Cuban people. Whether he can accomplish the latter aim presents an uncertain question. The Cubans take their politics seriously. President Machado, by his high-handed methods, has caused intensely bitter feeling against his administration. To erase this now would require the exercise of a higher sense of justice than the president, as judged by his record, seems to be capable of.

The best service he could render his country would seem to be to retire from the presidency and permit the election of a man who could command public confidence. Cubans will not easily overlook the blots on the present administration's record.

Some improvement in conditions is reported to have followed issuance of the amnesty decree. This, however, is no assurance that further violence will not occur.

SYNOPSIS

At the premiere of her latest motion picture, Leni Luneska, beautiful star, is stunned by the appearance of her jailbird husband, whom she married in Vienna when only fourteen. He insists upon recognition as her husband and waits in a private office of the theatre for her to reconsider her refusal. Lucky Cavanaugh, handsome gambler, who fell in love with Leni on sight that evening, tries to make Kruger leave. Kruger empties his gun at Cavanaugh without effect, then rushes into the next office in a rage. He surprises burglars looting a safe and is shot dead. Cavanaugh slips out unnoticed but meets Detective Tom Mulrooney in the hall. Later as Leni and Cavanaugh are about to leave the theatre to avoid questioning, Mulrooney stops them. They deny knowing Kruger, but the theatre manager identifies Kruger as the man Cavanaugh brought to the office to await Leni. Lucky cautions Leni against talking but she tells all to Mulrooney. Cavanaugh also reveals what he knows, except the name of "Slug," one of the robbers whom he recognized. Believing Cavanaugh knows who committed the robbery and killing, if he didn't himself, Mulrooney gives him four days in which to find the guilty man. Escorting Leni home, Cavanaugh finds "Slug" hiding in the shrubbery to warn him that the gangsters fear Cavanaugh will squeal and are out to get him. After leaving "Slug," Cavanaugh enters Leni's home. Before going up to Leni, he sits in a cozy chair thinking of her. Never before had he met a woman like her . . . he wonders if the fascination will last.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

Already he was a little blue, feeling in advance the pangs of parting. It would last for a little while and then he would be off again on the endless round of jeering at life and following the devious seduction of his will o' the wisp profession.

But something was giving him an odd feeling of danger. A premonition that he might not be able to sustain himself forever in his world of loyalties and humor, his universe of careless generosities and steel cold nerve.

A spark of discontent was beginning to glow. A woman . . . Leni Luneska . . .

Very slowly he brought himself to the clear realization that he wanted Leni as he had never wanted any woman before. Without egotism, he felt he could have her.

He was thinking thoughts now that welled up from the depth of his being. He could have her and all that went with her—the pleasantly flavored home like this, her glorious individuality, her rich voice, her golden hair. He could possess her every moment of his life from now on. He could . . .

Then the truth struck him like a fist between the eyes. It was not he who could possess Leni Luneska . . .

She would possess Lucky Cavanaugh!

The revelation came to him like the stripping away of a mask. Marriage to Leni would bind and stifle him in a silken cocoon of love. It would mean the surrender, the captivity of Lucky Cavanaugh.

Everything else would all be over.

In Leni's fragile body was an essence too potent to be subjected to any man. Before long—even yet tonight—he would begin to care so much that he would cease to be free and independent. She had too much charm and magnetism to be taken lightly. The whole proposition was getting clearer to him now.

The silence in which he sat was rent and torn apart suddenly by the imperative ringing of a telephone somewhere in an adjoining room. Cavanaugh let it ring for a while and then since no one else stirred to answer it, he rose and bumped against a few chairs until he found the instrument.

His intention was not to call Leni but pretend he was a servant and take any message.

"Hello," he said in a guarded voice.

He had taken no trouble to disguise his tone. There was an instant of silence in which the apparatus he held seemed curiously alive. Then a woman spoke with a voice like a warm bitter fluid.

"Hello, Lucky—thought I'd catch you there."

His first impulse was to hang up, but he knew the capabilities of Annette. She would keep ringing all night, or worse, get into a car and come out. Annette . . . wild . . . Latin . . . imperious . . .

"What do you want?" he asked, lowering his voice so that it would not be heard upstairs.

"You're not putting anything over on me, Lucky! I saw you in the box with her and I knew what would happen. Why didn't you call me up when you got back from Caliente?"

Against a woman like Annette a man was practically helpless.

Cross-wise across the bed on top of the silken coverlets Leni had flung herself with soft abandonment to small child-like sobs that came more from exhaustion than grief.

Immeasurable relief arrived with the tears.

In pajamas of heavy blue silk with her small feet bare and white she seemed smaller and younger than she really was. After a while she curled over on her side and waited, her eyes and her face still wet with tears. She was quieter now, yet somehow alert in her heart as the tide of physical comfort began to creep over her.

Somewhere in the house Cavanaugh was present. Beyond that fact she had no plans—no decision. It was enough to feel the sensation of his secure protection.

For the first time in her life somebody was watching over her. All of her anguish, as drowsiness stilled her, seemed drifting away. Her nerves were no longer tight as violin strings but were loosened and soothed. It was indescribably blessed. The self-conscious knowledge of his presence was a cloud of contentment surrounding her.

Without any sense of being disturbed, Leni heard the distant ringing of the telephone downstairs.

The bell would be unheard by the servants sleeping in another part of the house. It made no difference. After a time she was conscious—without actually catching his voice—that Cavanaugh was talking with someone on the phone.

Leni sat up in bed. For a while she sat with her knees drawn up, listening.

The house was so still that she could hear the masculine quality of his voice although it was subdued to mere murmuring. As she listened she became wider awake. Her feet swung to the floor and her toes found their way into soft, flat-soled slippers.

Whatever the conversation downstairs was about she knew with a small sharp instinct that it concerned herself. Step by step Leni moved into the hall and softly down the stairs. She drew nearer to Cavanaugh in the semi-darkness.

Her heart moved a little faster. There was nothing complicated in her motive. It was a simple primitive desire to be near him. The fact that he was talking to somebody was really secondary. On the lower floor she turned an angle of the hall and came up to the door of a small room where he stood dimly outlined, the reddish tip of a cigarette in his hand punctuating the night. He was leaning against a shelf of books, holding a French telephone. His back was toward Leni, a silhouette with broad shoulders and straight legs.

For a moment she stood regarding him, mysteriously gratified by the artistic rightness of his proportions. He was listening to someone who talked for a long time. Then he spoke with the tone of argument.

"All right—tomorrow then. Yes, I promise."

Leni began to have the uncomfortable feeling of eavesdropping. She was on the verge of letting him know she was there when he spoke again.

"Will you be a good girl, Annette, please?" he pleaded with muffled exasperation. "Calm down and go to bed. You're just exciting yourself over nothing. I can't keep arguing with you all night. I care exactly as much for you as I always did—but I'm not at all interested in your hysterics. If you haven't any pride you certainly ought to have a sense of humor——"

Once more he was interrupted. Time enough for Leni to glide into the room with a soft swishing of her silken pajamas. Her hand went unerringly to the switch on a table lamp in the room and the secrecy of the room vanished in a flood of amber light. Cavanaugh's shoulders, sleek in their dinner jacket, swung around. Leni saw a new face, darkened with moody impatience.

"Wait a minute," he said into the telephone and put it down.

"I thought I'd give you a little light," Leni said, looking straight at him. "We have plenty of electricity in this house.

"Don't be foolish!" he said to her sharply. It was the first time he had ever addressed her in that tone.

"I won't!" she answered, her eyes darkening.

An unpleasant warmth was beginning to prickle her skin. Her face, she felt, was beginning to get white with a nameless passion. A tension like rubber bands was drawing her brows together.

"Don't mind me," she said coldly. "I'm going back upstairs. You needn't keep the lady waiting."

Without taking his eyes from her face, Cavanaugh reached behind him and picked up the phone.

"Goodbye!" he said into it briefly and put up the thing with a decisive click.

"I'm sorry this happened," he stated almost curtly. "A fool woman saw me with you tonight and called me up here. I don't know how much you heard of what I said to her——"

"Very little. It doesn't matter, I assure you."

Cavanaugh took a step forward and put both his hands on Leni's shoulders. "I'm sorry—it does matter. I've annoyed you——"

"Take your hands off me!" exclaimed Leni.

Tears began to flood her eyes. Cavanaugh's hands, warm and compelling, continued to hold her in a steadying grasp.

"If there is anything in the world that is disgusting it's a jealous woman!" said Cavanaugh grimly. "I just hung up the telephone on one of that kind. You're sore at me—because she called me up here. I'm telling you—right now—that we've both too much at stake to clutter it up with any darn foolishness."

She gulped in her throat like a little girl. "Will you please . . . let me go . . ."

"I will not!"

With one hand he turned out the lamp then, as though she had no weight at all, picked her up in his arms like a child and started toward the stairs.

BEHIND the SCENES in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL.

Copyright, 1933, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD .....—Hollywood's enthusiasm for the picturesque nineties grows rather than diminishes.

Following the popular trend, Carl Laemmle, Jr. is rushing a writer to work on a ZaSu Pitts-Slim Summerville comedy to take place in the era made famous by Mae West in "She Done Him Wrong."

Carl Laemmle, Jr.

The picture will be the next co-starring vehicle of Universal's favorite team and will start in six weeks.

Meanwhile, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is to present Ed Wynn in a story of the nineties. Twentieth Century Productions is shooting "The Bowery," Paramount has just finished "One Sunday Afternoon" and almost every other studio will dramatize the period in one or more pictures.

Credit Eddie Sutherland with the week's best fish story. The director and a friend had chartered a yacht and were out after yellow-tail.

Let Eddie tell it: "After hours of fishing the live bait was about gone. There were only two left and they were wiggling feebly. Just to see what it would do, my friend poured a little brandy in with them.

"They seemed to perk up so he baited his hook. It had no more than hit the water when—'wham'—came the strike. It was a terrific fight. Finally, more than a half hour later, my friend managed to land the catch.

"Imagine his surprise. The yellow tail hadn't even been hooked. The bait had it firmly by the back of the neck."

HOLLYWOOD PARADE:

Just after dawn the other morning, some meanie tossed a stench-bomb through the window of one of Hollywood's swankiest restaurants. The maitre-d was busy all day making up alibis to the customers.

Sally Eilers, Hoot Gibson and Harry Joe Brown sat in a Paramount projection room recently and watched the airplane crash which almost cost Hoot his life. The cowboy-star had the strange experience of seeing himself removed from the wrecked plane and carried away in an ambulance. No, Sally and Hoot are not going around together again. She just drove him over to the studio.

MOVIE TID-BITS:

Paul Lukas and Tito Falconi, the Italian flyer who startled crowds at the recent air races, have struck up a great friendship. Falconi is staying at the Lukas home and will pilot the actor to Chicago when he flies there on the 24th. Afterwards, Lukas and his wife will pay their first visit to Hungary since he became a screen star.

Studio attaches claim that 31 pages of script had been shot with Sylvia Sidney before the actress walked out on her picture, "The Way to Love." They'll tell you that even in non-strike times, 4 pages a day is a good shooting schedule. . . . More trouble may be brewing for Paramount unless somebody can smooth Ricardo Cortez's ruffled feelings. The actor is openly declaring he would like to be free of his contract.

Raquel Torres is going to London to make a picture after she finishes at Paramount. She denies it also will be a honeymoon with Charles Feldman. . . . Sharon Lynne is another Hollywood star who plans a British film. . . . But when Groucho Marx was talking of a London vacation, his young daughter registered an objection. "Every time we go to Europe, I have to have my hair curled," she complained.

NAMES
you should know

YOU like to know names that everybody knows — name of the man who tied lightning to a kite; name of the man who watched a teakettle and went out and made an engine. Just knowing such names gives you pleasure.

Yet there are names that thousands of people know that can give you much more pleasure in a much more personal way. Names that stand for the best things to eat, to wear, to sleep on. Names, that if connected with the salad dressing, hat, fountain pen you select—or any other desirable thing—mean it is most desirable. Names written large in ADVERSISEMENTS.

Advertisements tell why those are wise names for you to know. Why such names greet you in the best grocery, department and hardware stores. Why those names are in the buying vocabulary of thousands . . . are believed in by thousands . . . justify belief!

Read the advertisements. Don't ask vaguely in a store for "cold cream," "a skillet," "a vacuum cleaner." Ask for So-and-So's Cold Cream, So-and-So's Skillet, So-and So's Vacuum Cleaner. Use the names, you have learned through advertisements, that stand for the product that means most to you and most to everybody.

It pays to read all advertisements in this paper

TRAY SHOULDERS ARE ADORNING NEW DRESS STYLES FOR EVENING

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS—(INS)—Chic rests on the shoulders this season. Wider, wider and wider they grow and the smart woman must shoulder her way through the summer if she would show style.

Tray shoulders appear on gorgeous new evening wraps in gold and white lame and cartridge pleats give width to coats in many fabrics, wool, taffeta, linen and velvet.

Enormous tippets in organdie with cock's feathers in between their crisp ruffles appear on youthful evening dresses as shoulder accessories. For shoulders come on day frocks and on day coats, ruffles of tulle and lace, balloons of organdie or stiffened lace add shoulder chic to slim afternoon ones that would look almost wilted without them.

Short evening capes appear to be padded where they meet the shoulders and on the simpler day frocks width is achieved by splitting the top of the sleeve and adding little frills to the oyster-like opening.

Immense leg 'o mutton sleeves with stiff perpendicular ridges decorate little taffeta coats like mess jackets and other leg o' mutton sleeves with hollowed out folds come on prim-fitting coats in plain colors with flowered chiffon evening frocks beneath them. One of these in hydrangea-blue taffeta comes with a blue and pink chiffon dress and another in chalk-white with a black chiffon spotted in white.

"ALICE BANDEAU" FOR HAIR IS ADOPTED BY PARIS SPORTSWOMEN

By Alice Langelier
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

PARIS — (INS) — Alice in Wonderland has wandered back to smart beaches this summer by way of the "Alice bandeau" which keeps coiffures chic and neat. It comes of ribbon, silk or velvet, or even rubber which will stand wetting and takes on many original arrangements to suit the individual who wears it.

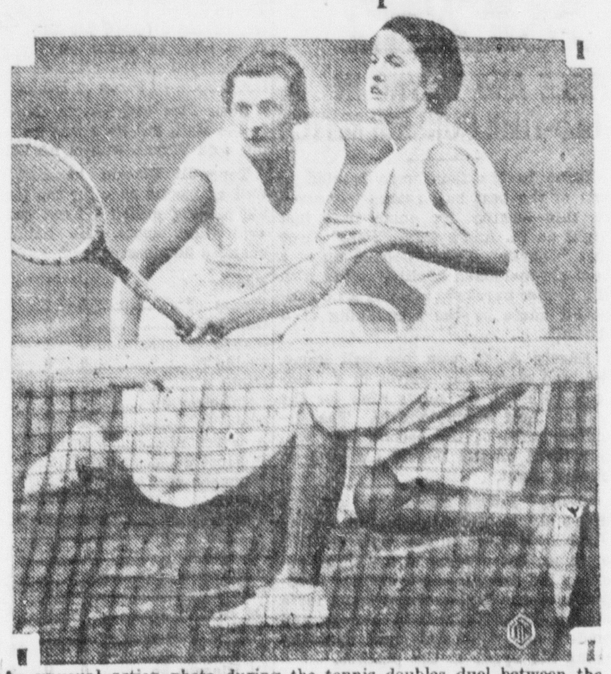

Revived as a ballroom mode by this season's debutantes for wear with their organdie frocks, it is now being adopted by sportswomen of all kinds.

The fashion for hair ribbons and ornaments is very much on the increase to match the more romantic tendency in evening dress. A lovely diamante Alice in Wonderland comb was recently seen with a puffed-shoulder white organdie gown and a narrow pink velvet snood matched another. Diamond clips are popular as well as large tortoiseshell combs of Spanish influence.

Fashionable wooden sandals have hinged soles this summer to prevent the fair wearer from shufflin' along.

The metal vogue is likely to continue throughout the winter. It makes an admirable way of introducing bright touches into sports clothes of neutral tones. A smart frock of oatmeal-cloth in gray is fastened up the front with hooks and eyes made of ivory and black enamel and a black felt sailor hat has a similar ornament in the front with a silver fox to complete the scheme.

HIBERNIANS WILL PLAY PARKLAND A. A. HERE

Bristol fans will have their final opportunity of the season to see the Hibernians on their home grounds tonight when the nine ends its home season by meeting the Parkland A. A. team.

Parkland still has a chance to finish in third place in the second half race and to accomplish this must win tonight's fray. At the last meeting of the teams, the Hibs scored a close 1-0 win a hurling match between Gene Lawler and Wilson Holland. These two hurlers will most likely be on the hill tonight.

Johnny Mulholland's Bristol A. A. nine will attempt to do the Odd Fellows a big favor by trimming the Hulmeville nine which has captured ten straight contests and five of these, the last five, have been shut-out wins.

The A's are confident of stopping both streaks of the leaders and Mulholland will use "Lefty" Diehm to stop the Hulmeville bats. Black will do the tossing for the Hulmeville club.

"OLD-TIMERS" WILL MEET MULHOLLAND'S A. A. SOON

Bristol baseball fans will be treated to a feature baseball game to be played on St. Ann's field at the close of the Twilight League games, between Brooks's "Old-Timers" of Bristol, and Johnny Mulholland's Bristol A. A., for the benefit of the American Legion Cadets.

The "Old-Timers'" team will consist of the following players: "Ted" Roper, Johnston ("Ike") Hetherington, "Crude" Hagerman, "Sammy" Dietrich, "Powder River" Brooks, "Danny" McDevitt, "Bud" David, Elmer ("Whitey") White, "Johnny" Brady, "Big Hoko" Leighton, Kline and Henry.

The "Old-Timers" are still in shape, and a hotly-contested game is expected. The date will be announced later. The American Legion and the Legion Cadet drum corps will parade and drill on the diamond before the game.

FIRCE AND WHYNO IN OLD-TIME HURLING MATCH

Close to 500 fans were treated to one of the best ball games witnessed in this locality for some time last night on St. Ann's field. "Pete" Firce and "Charlie" Whyno hooked up in a real old-fashioned hurling match with the former narrowly missing a no-run-no-hit game by the misjudging of a fly-ball.

Edgely A. C. won the ball game, 4-0, and placed themselves in a deadlock with the St. Ann's nine for the second half championship. The deciding game of the second half will be played on the Edgely diamond on Friday night.

"Lefty" Budz's misjudging of Bornice's fly in the first inning robbed Firce of a place in the mythical hall of fame. After being in a waiting position for the pill the horsehide dropped over the first-sacker's dome for a single. Firce fanned 13 batters and waded out of several tight spots by using his speed in the pinches.

Whyno, pitching in his usual masterful style, really deserved a better fate than was accorded him. Up until the sixth, the Edgelyites had made a lone bingle off his delivery and that if fielded would have been an out. After that first inning the visitors were kept away from first base until the fifth when an error placed Leinheiser on first, but he remained there while the next three batters were retired. In all, only four hits were made and three of these came in the last two frames. Two of the hits were of the scratch variety.

Edgely scored its first run in the sixth when Piazza drew a pass and was immediately sacrificed to second by Gould. Manzo caught both Pieo and Juno out of position and dribbled a hit between the two St. Ann's players, Piazza scoring on the play, although a play was made for him at the plate.

Firce helped his own cause in the sixth by singling home two runs. With one out, Budz was given free transportation to first. Harmsen lined a single to right. Firce followed with a hit and both runners scored.

St. Ann's was presented with several opportunities to score. Bornice and Pieo reached first safely with no one gone, but were stranded. Angelo treached first on Firce's error in the third and stole second, but died there. In the fifth, with one gone, Juno was walked. Angelo fanned and then DiTanna lifted a high fly to right center, Piazza dropped the ball, but when Juno tried to count on the play he was nipped at the plate on a fast relay, Piazza to Firce to Hibbs.

Both Pieo and Oriola drew passes in the sixth but Pieo was nailed stealing, and Whyno was of no help.

Tony Di Blassio handled himself well at second base for the losers, and his playing pulled Whyno out of several tight spots. He handled nine chances flawlessly.

Washington, was the highlight of his career. According to circus hands, Tusko resented a beating given him by a trainer called "Hick Pockets," who wanted Tusko to stand still while his canopied howdah and blanket were being strapped in place. As "Hick Pockets" jumped to the ground to complete his task, Tusko reached around, picked him up and tossed the trainer 20 feet. Then Tusko started out.

He rumbled through the town, upset about 20 automobiles, attempted to push between two houses which stood too close together, crushed in the side of one like so much cardboard, ripped out 40 feet of fence along the railroad and played with two railroad men in a switchmen's shanty like a kitten playing with mice. When the switchmen started to push open the door, Tusko would push it shut again, rocking the little building back from its foundation. Tiring of the stunt, Tusko trotted away, leaving his terrified prisoners in a cold sweat.

He was captured when he tried to squeeze between two box-cars. Two large female elephants were chained to the big bull and in this manner he was returned to the lot.

Tusko's reputed bull fight near El Paso is the best-known yarn among press agent stories of doubtful authenticity.

According to the story, Tusko and another elephant were placed in a Mexican arena with 20 wild bulls for a "fight to the death." Cowmen came from far and wide to see the battle. But when the bulls were turned in the arena, they gave one look at their opponents and huddles in a corner while Tusko looked on with indifferent contempt.

Tusko came to the United States in 1900 from Siam. He was only ten years old and but five feet high when Colonel N. L. Clark started him out on his first circus tour.

Is Her Reign Nearing End?

By BURNLEY

ANOTHER champion is to meet a crucial test this week—the greatest women's tennis champion in the history of the game: Helen Wills Moody. In this year of gloom and doom for champions, Mrs. Moody steps into the Women's Nationals to assert her dominance over the feminine tennis world. Will she succeed?

The title now rests with Miss Helen Jacobs of California, and the plucky little champion is on hand to defend her crown, but her recent play inclines the experts to figure her chances as rather slim. The competition in these matches is stiffer than it has been in former years. Last year, for example, Mrs. Moody did not enter.

The interest centers, of course, around Mrs. Moody and Miss Dorothy Round, of England. When Mrs. Moody lost the second set in her match against Miss Round at Wimbledon, a clean record of six years was broken. Not since 1927, when she lost a set to Miss Gwynneth Sterry, had Mrs. Moody lost to any opponent in women's singles matches.

Many experts who saw the match decided that Mrs. Moody has weakened considerably. They say that her footwork has definitely slowed and that her backhand has dwindled in power. And there were other technical criticisms of Mrs. Moody's play.

But Helen said her playing hasn't changed at all and indicated that she was perfectly well satisfied with the way she beat Miss Round—the lost set notwithstanding.

The experts say that the Queen is slipping—that her steely brand of fight has cracked. But they can't get a retort from the champion—she is as calm and confident as ever.

Miss Round's rise to the tennis front rank has been fast and furious. She is a splendid player, keen on every shot and as canny as any player in the pinches.

In order to meet Mrs. Moody, Miss Round disposed of Miss Jacobs in three sets with a brand of play that completely outclassed the California girl.

Can Mrs. Moody overcome this latest threat of the victorious Britishers? Her tennis reputation—one of the greatest ever known—is staked on the answer!
